

Anne Morris
PBS & J Corporation

Anne is a senior project manager with PBS&J's transportation group in Columbia, South Carolina. Her Bachelor's degree is in Architecture and her Master's degree is in City and Regional Planning. She has 30 years of experience in highway corridor planning, environmental documentation, public involvement and land development planning.

She has been the principal author of more than 25 environmental documents on projects in 15 states and the District of Columbia. In addition, she has provided Environmental Justice training for MPO, state and federal agency staffs.

Currently, she is a member of Transportation Research Board's Subcommittee on Community Impact Assessment, Environmental Justice in Transportation Task Force and Context Sensitive Solutions Committee. Anne's transportation projects have been selected by FHWA for inclusion in their 2000 and 2002 Transportation and Environmental Justice publications and her Lessons Learned in Preparing the US 17 Community Impact Assessment is on FHWA's website.

Anne's presentation is based on a nationwide survey that she and Laurie Potier-Brown have conducted for the FHWA on how to identify and engage low literacy and limited English Proficiency populations.

Darla Zakaluzny
Volusia, FL MPO

Darla Zakaluzny is the Public Information Officer for the Volusia County MPO in Daytona Beach, Florida and has been with the organization for eighteen years. Darla's primary duty is to increase public awareness and involvement in the transportation planning process. She is also responsible for developing the MPO's newsletters, annual reports, and assisting with the public involvement portions of the Long Range Transportation Plan update and the Community Impact Assessment/Efficient Transportation Decision Making process. Darla also enjoys assisting in the promotion of bicycle and pedestrian safety throughout the Volusia County area.

